Fine morning. Left at noon to lunch with Isabel and Traff. They had Lord and Lady Eldon, with two sons, staying with them at Rochefort. An attractive couple. Eldon said that Bobbit y Salisbury would undoubtedly have been the next Prime Minister if he were not in the Lords, and always assuming his health could stand it.

We returned in the afternoon to La Baule. I swam with Sasha, who has become wonderfully seaworthy. We had dinner with the children and went early to bed.
